September 02, 2009.
Revised September, 2010;
Revised June, 2011.
1. Guidelines for the provision of alternative arrangements (Special Concessions)

   - Guidelines for the provision of alternative arrangements (Special Concessions) for students writing national exams (SEA, NCSE, National Tests, School Leaving Examination).

2. Rationale/Background

   - An increasing number of applications are received by the Ministry of Education each year from parents, principals and teachers for the provision of alternative arrangements (special concessions) that would afford equity for all students writing national exams.

   - The Ministry is strongly committed to equality of opportunity and equity in its provision for all students and is supportive of all arrangements which will reduce barriers to learning and assessment, and therefore contribute to the development of our citizens in alignment with vision 2020.

3. Scope

   These guidelines apply to:

   - all primary, secondary or special school students, teachers, parents and principals of private and public schools
   - all professionals of private organizations, and public institutions involved in the testing and assessment of students.

4. Special Concessions

   (i) Special Concessions are designed to provide equity not advantage, and to serve to level the playing field for students with disabilities and other special challenges.

   (ii) Special Concessions are the alterations made to the standard format of an examination paper or to the conditions under which an examination/assessment is done or to the date of an examination, in order to accommodate the special need of the students. All concessions are guided by universal standards. (See appendix – I)

   (iii) They increase the student’s access to instruction and assessment by addressing identified needs and when used appropriately, they reduce or even eliminate the effects of a student’s challenge. However, they do not reduce the learning expectations for students.
5. Eligibility for Special Concessions

Applications for the provision of the relevant accommodations or special concessions may be submitted for students in the following categories:

a. Students with Medical, Physical and Sensory Impairments

Applications for students with medical, physical and sensory impairments must be accompanied by bonafide documentation from a recognized medical institution or qualified professional or specialist.

b. Students with Learning Disabilities

Applications for students with learning disabilities must be accompanied by bonafide documentation (valid for a maximum of three years from the date of assessment) from a professional/organization qualified to do psycho-educational assessments. (See Appendix – II)

Speech and Language assessment reports must be accompanied by psycho-educational assessment reports.

Students without documented disabilities who receive classroom support or use instructional tools or accommodations in the classroom are not automatically eligible for these special arrangements.

c. Other special circumstances

Any other special circumstances under which concessions may be required on the day of the examination may be submitted for consideration. These include acceptable conditions such as illness, injury, bereavement, or other particular circumstances that may adversely affect students’ performance during assessment.

d. Emergencies

Applications for concessions as a result of an emergency situation or condition which may adversely affect students’ performance during assessment may be submitted for consideration after the given deadline and up to one month prior to the examination. The following are examples of situations or conditions which may constitute an emergency:-

- Sudden onset of illness
- Recent injury
- Bereavement

All required documentation must be attached in accordance with guidelines given in this document.
Applications submitted less than one month prior to the examination will not be entertained for the scheduled examination. They may, however, be considered for any subsequent Make-up Examinations, which in the instance of the SEA, are scheduled from one month after the Examination date.

6. Classifications or Types of Special Concessions/Accommodations

Concessions offered can be classified as follows:

- Presentation Accommodations – adjust the presentation of test material and/or test directions (Braille, Large Print). These include the use of specific personnel (Interpreter; Reader; Scribe/Writer)

Guidelines for Special Concessions (SEA - 2012)
Psycho-educational Assessment
Key elements of a Psycho-educational Assessment

Psycho-educational assessments provide estimates of the client’s intellectual abilities, educational achievement levels and perceptual-motor functioning; as well as, if necessary, the results of rating tests of attention, behavior/emotional functioning and adaptive behavior. The goal of the assessment is to determine if the client has learning disorders/disabilities, mental retardation/borderline intellectual functioning or any attention problems that may be impeding their academic progress. Assessments also yield recommendations relevant for educational planning.

Once the testing has been completed, the psycho-educational report will provide the results and interpretations of the various psychological tests, as well as pertinent details about the client’s birth, medical and developmental history, social and behavior history, and educational history. The aforementioned information is presented in the report to provide information, but also evidence and justification for the diagnosis and is valid for a maximum of three years from the date of assessment.
Intelligence Tests:

Intelligence tests or IQ tests should ideally provide the following:

- Full-scale intelligence quotient: overall, composite measure of intelligence.
- Verbal IQ: estimate of verbal comprehension and expression.
- Performance IQ: estimate of visual-spatial reasoning.

Other supplementary measures of cognitive abilities are also useful such as:

- Processing Speed (a measure of informative-processing speed), and
- Working Memory (a measure of short-term memory and attention).

Recommended intelligence scales include:

- Wechsler Preschool and Primary Scales of Intelligence – Revised (WPPSI-R)
- Kaufman Assessment Battery for Children (KABC)
- Woodcock Johnson Cognitive

Achievement Tests:

Assessment of achievement is an important part of assessment to rule out/diagnoses learning disabilities.

A client is not diagnosed with a learning disability if his/her academic limitations are found to be the result of the following:

- Lack of schooling (due to absenteeism or inadequate instruction)
- Impaired vision or hearing
- Mental Retardation evidence by an IQ score lower than approximately 70, and deficits in at least two areas of adaptive functioning (Communication, Socialization, Daily Living Skills and Motor Skills).

Most psychologists use an Achievement/ability Standard Score Discrepancy Model to determine the presence of a learning disability. Ideally, the client’s IQ score is compared to the reading, mathematics, and Written Expression composite test scores. If there is a significant discrepancy between two scores, then the client is said to have a learning disability in that area.
A discrepancy of more than one standard deviation (i.e., more than 15 points) is considered significant. Sometimes, a larger discrepancy (e.g. more than 1.5 standard deviations, which would be more than 22.5 points) is considered to be significant. The developers of the WISC-IV have provided tables in their manual to make the analysis much simpler.

Recommended achievement tests include:

Kaufman Test of Educational Achievement – II (KTEA-II)
Woodcock Johnson – III Tests of Achievement (WJ-III)
Wechsler Individual Achievement Test – II (WIAT-II)

Perceptual Motor tests:

These tests, also called tests of visual motor integration assist in the diagnosis of learning disabilities and disorders of perception.

Recommended tests include:

Bender Visual Motor Gestalt Test (BVMGT)
Developmental Test of Visual Motor Integration (VM1)

Measure of Adaptive Behaviour:

A measure of adaptive behavior (i.e., domestic, daily living, social and functional academic and communication skills) must be obtained in making a diagnosis of mental retardation.

Commonly used measures of adaptive behavior include:

Vineland Adaptive Behaviour Scales – II (VABS-II)
Tests and Rating of Attention:

There is no single test for attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD). However, there are several behavior rating and computerized tests of attention; most provide measures of hyperactivity-impulsivity and inattentiveness.

Some commonly used measures include:

* Connor’s Parent Rating Scales – R
* Connor’s Teaching Rating Scales – R
* Brown Attention – Deficit Disorder Scales

Who Can Perform a Psycho-educational Assessment?

Psycho-educational assessments should be performed by psychologists or psychometrists. Examiners should have extensive knowledge and training in psychological tests and the administration and analysis of these tests.

It is important to ascertain if the professional has specific training and expertise in psycho-educational assessment, particularly assessment of learning disabilities and other learning disorders.
